Executive Summary

Once again, Kentucky's historic agricultural diversification program has completed another successful year. It has only been five and half short years since the first projects were approved, but in that short time over $212 Million has been invested in Kentucky Agriculture from the Agricultural Development Fund (ADF), $39,862,416 million this past fiscal year.

County fund investments are the backbone of this diversification effort in Kentucky and have been partly responsible for the improvements and growth in the beef cattle industry and many other areas of production agriculture. Thousands of farmers each year access cost-share grants for the development of infrastructure on their farms or to make improvements to their operations that will generate new revenue.

Over $129 million in county funds have been invested since the spring of 2001. With the producer's match, these funds have leveraged over $258 million investments on Kentucky farms. These county-based programs are possible because of the leadership and commitment provided by County Agricultural Development Councils, County Extension Agents, County Model Program Administrators, and many other volunteers.

At the state level, the Kentucky Agricultural Development Board (KADB) continues to meet the demands and fulfill the priorities established in Kentucky's Long-term Plan for Agriculture. During their annual planning session, the KADB invited representatives from 18 different agricultural industries and organizations to take a look at the past, present, and future of the Agricultural Development Fund. These groups were asked to address questions about their industry in order to assist the KADB better understand the goals and future trends within each sector of agriculture.

In preparation for fiscal year 2007 the Board did a complete review and evaluation of Kentucky's Long-term Plan for Agriculture and recommitted itself to the plan's goals and priorities. They reviewed and updated their "Guiding Principles for Investment," incorporating new ideas and deleting obsolete ones.

The staff of the Governor's Office of Agricultural Policy continues its outstanding efforts to make this a successful program. The staff provided training sessions for County Program Administrators, hosted the annual ADF meeting, and regional roundtables across the Commonwealth to provide those who are on the frontlines an opportunity to share their ideas and concerns. Staff worked one on one with applicants and carried out the directives of Governor Fletcher and the KADB.

The purpose of the Agricultural Development Fund is to assist farm families in making the transition from an economy that is dependant on tobacco to one that is strong, growing and diverse with new opportunities in agriculture. We can be proud of our successes and the new economy we are building in Kentucky. Thanks to these financial resources provided by Governor Fletcher and the General Assembly, Kentucky agriculture can continue moving forward.

Long-term Plan Priorities

Kentucky's historic investment in agricultural diversification created an unprecedented opportunity for Kentucky farmers to access funds for agricultural diversification and the expansion of farm based enterprises. To provide a guide for this investment, Kentucky's agricultural community came together and created a long-term plan. In January 2002, the Kentucky Agricultural Development Board approved Kentucky's first long-term plan for agricultural development, Cultivating Rural Prosperity. This plan is the blueprint for Kentuckians in addressing issues associated with agricultural growth and diversification in the Commonwealth as we begin the difficult task of changing a industry that is dependent upon tobacco.

The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board focused this fiscal year on the following six priorities as they continued their commitment to funding agricultural diversification throughout the Commonwealth.

Priority #1

Marketing and Market Development

The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board has worked extensively with producers and commodity groups toward the development of the infrastructure for Kentucky agriculture. Investments in this area range from local farmers' markets to large-scale value-added processing, all of which are important in creating a comprehensive local regional and state marketing system for Kentucky farm products.

Priority #2

Improving Access to Capital

The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board recognizes that, while capital sources are generally available to producers, commercial lenders might be reluctant to provide financing for products and businesses where there is limited financial history. To address this concern, the Board supported the reactivation of the Kentucky Agricultural Finance Corporation.

Priority #3

Financial Incentives for Environmental Stewardship

Developing environmental awareness in tandem with agricultural diversification is critical to the quality of Kentucky's rural communities. The Agricultural Development Fund continues to support state-wide conservation efforts through direct budget appropriations for

Marketing and Market

Development: Allied Food Marketers West helps producers in diversifying their agribusiness ventures and provides new markets for Kentucky Producers.

Access to Capital: Kentucky Agricultural Finance Corporation provides loans for agricultural facilities including structures that improve the profitability of a farming operation.

Environmental Stewardship: The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board continues to support state wide conservation efforts through its programs and policies.

Long-term Plan Priorities

Education and Computer Literacy: Kentucky Community and Technical College System teaches farmers how to effectively use computer technology.

investments in conservation programs, farmland preservation, and rural waterline extension. The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board has also supported environmental stewardship through the approval of local programs designed to improve farm management techniques for long-term sustainability.

Priority #4

Farm Family Education and Computer Literacy

Farm families are the cornerstones of Kentucky's agricultural community. The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board is committed to strengthening and improving the accessibility of education and training programs tailored specifically for the needs of farm families. Much of the funding in this area falls under the Kentucky Center for Agricultural Development and Entrepreneurship program, which is discussed in detail in the KCADE report.

Supporting Local Leadership: Roundtables and workshops were provided to support and train local leaders.

Priority #5

Supporting Local Leadership

County Agricultural Development Councils and County Extension Agents are the catalyst for change that is occurring in Kentucky's agricultural community. Kentucky Agricultural Development Funds, through direct budget appropriations, have been used to support this leadership by providing administrative funds for county councils and merit-based bonuses for extension personnel. The Agricultural Development Board recognizes the need to continue supporting the leadership efforts of the county agricultural development councils and the Cooperative Extension Service network, while developing programs to encourage local leadership in rural communities.

Research and Development: Research is being done for plant made pharmaceuticals using tobacco plants.

Priority #6

Research and Development

The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board recognizes the need to maintain strong commitments to applied research in existing farm product areas, as well as the importance of exploring the viability of high value markets in non-traditional areas.

Entrepreneurship Program

The Kentucky Center for Agricultural Development and Entrepreneurship (KCADE) continues to strive towards its mission to advance statewide efforts to diversify the basis of Kentucky's agricultural economy by providing or coordinating: 1) technical assistance; 2) resource information; 3) cost-share grants; and 4) capacity-building education, and hands-on training.

Grant Program

Since its establishment, KCADE has supported market/feasibility studies, entrepreneurship development, technical assistance/education, and product research. At its May 2006 meeting, the Kentucky Agricultural Development Board committed a total of $1 million for continuation of KCADE's grant program for agricultural entrepreneurs. No grants were awarded for fiscal year 2006.

Technical Assistance & Education

As part of its outreach efforts, KCADE publishes three electronic newsletters for Kentucky's agriculture and rural communities.

The Kentucky Agricultural Development Fund Update (KADFU) assists in the administration of County Councils and provides frequent updates on program and policies. [Semi-monthly, 250 recipients]

The KCADE Bulletin & Grant Bytes provide information on resources available to entrepreneurs and help inform producers of funding opportunities available from other organizations. [Quarterly (Bulletin), Monthly (Bytes); 600 recipients]

Upon the recommendation of the Board's Marketing & Entrepreneurship Committee, KCADE continues to build on the education component, which is key to entrepreneurship development. A staff member is dedicated to coordinating educational information and programs. The Committee also recommended that KCADE focus on creating an environment for entrepreneurship in rural Kentucky. To that end, KCADE partnered with the Kentucky Entrepreneurial Coaches Institute (KECI) to offer two capacity-building workshops in south central and south eastern Kentucky.

The workshops, titled "Creating an Entrepreneurial Culture in Your Community," featured Karen Dabson of the RUPRI Center for Rural Entrepreneurship in Lincoln, NE who provided an overview of entrepreneurship as an effective economic development strategy, as well as providing the tools for participants to develop a blueprint for identifying, engaging, and energizing entrepreneurs in their communities. Fifty-two individuals, ranging from economic development leaders to agricultural producers, participated.

The Board's Marketing & Entrepreneurship Committee will review progress in late 2006 and make recommendations for continued activities of the entrepreneurship program.

County Model Programs

County Model Programs provide assistance to individual producers through local administrative organizations. They are designed to provide farmers with cost-share funds which gives them the opportunity to improve and diversify their current production practices. The following thirteen model programs are offered throughout the Commonwealth.

The Agricultural Diversification Program is designed to improve net farm income through the development and expansion of new agricultural products and through the development of new ways of working with existing agricultural commodities.

The Cattle Genetics Improvement Program is designed to increase the genetic quality of beef and dairy cattle in Kentucky through the selection of superior sire, either through purchase/lease of sires or semen.

The Cattle Handling Facilities Program is designed to improve and promote best management and health practices that augment efficient production and marketing opportunities.

The Dairy Diversification Program is designed to encourage and assist existing and new dairy producers in renovating and modernizing dairy facilities.

The Farm Livestock Fencing Improvement Program is designed to improve pasture quantity, quality, and efficient use for livestock producers.

The Forage Improvement and Utilization Program is designed to improve forage quality, quantity, and efficient use, as well as, encourage science-based forage management decisions.

The Goat and Sheep Diversification Program is designed to assist producers in diversifying into goat and sheep production by promoting animal health and improving the genetic base of Kentucky's goat and sheep herds.

The Hay Straw and Commodity Storage

Program is designed to employ best practices related to storage and utilization of feed, hay and straw, thus improving feed and straw quality and animal nutrition.

The On Farm Water Enhancement Program is designed to provide farmers the opportunity to adopt a proactive and systematic approach to expand existing water supplies or to develop alternative water resources.

The Shared Use Equipment Program is designed to impact a high number of producers who cannot justify ownership expenses associated with certain equipment by helping them access technology necessary to improve their operation in an economic manner.

The Swine Diversification Program is designed to enable a farmer to begin a swine enterprise and allow producers already engaged in swine production to expand/modernize the scope of their enterprise.

The Technology Program is designed to improve farm operation efficiency and assist producers already exploring the use of technology, or wanting to start exploring technology, in their operations.

The Timber Production, Utilization, and Marketing Program is designed to develop new revenue sources for farmers through growing and utilizing existing and new natural resources and to promote timber production and processing on areas on farms not suitable for crop or livestock production.
